

Appeal to the Solitary One

by Rosario Castellanos Translated by Rachel M. Popma

It's necessary, at times, to find company.

My friend, it's not possible to be born or to die without another. It's good that friendship removes from work the appearance of punishment and from happiness the illicit air of theft.

How could you be alone at that complete hour, in which you talk and talk with things until the dawn?
